Mokena Home Coming Proves Big Success

The Mokena Homecoming is now a matter of local history, but the last days of the past week and Sunday will remain very pleasant memories in the minds of the hundreds of people who attended the gala affair.

Everything ran as smooth as could be and only praise has been heard for the fine entertainment program, the splendid exhibits, games, rides, eats, etc.

It is estimated that fully 5,000 people were on the grounds during the entire period of the homecoming.

Ideal weather favored the undertaking up until Sunday night when a rain storm climaxed the program.

Sunday afternoon fully 1500 witnessed the parade. Walter McGovney 79 years old, a native son of Mokena and Rene Guindon, the latter being the genial foreman of the composing room of the News-Bulletin put on a very interesting skit by way of a bride and groom impersonation, with Mr. Guindon all rouged and powdered taking the part of the bride.

He had made miniature bouquets of flowers from his garden which he handed out. The pair rode in an old buggy bearing the date 1832. The vehicle was drawn by a white horse.

There were other attractive features by way of floats by the Boy Scouts, and the News-Bulletin.

The parade was headed by Chief Iron Heart a full blooded Sioux Indian from North Dakota. Legion Posts, Girl Scouts and the Mokena and Frankfort combined bands were also in the parade.

In the evening a fine program was presented by the choir of the Salem Evangelical church of Chicago. Classical and religious numbers were sung and were immensely enjoyed. The Kivans Band of Chicago Heights were also heard in a fine band concert.

Among the outstanding offerings in the entertainment line were several numbers by the students of the Joliet Conservatory of music under the direction of Mrs. Hauser. Miss Dorothy Robson, Palos Park's own songstress was also heard in a number of cow boy songs. Mokena's own favorite trio consisting of Frank Hirsch, Jr., Walter Olson and Stokes Nebeker was also heard and much appreciated.

Radio Station WCLS of Joliet did an excellent job in broadcasting the various events thru Ted Blair, their man on the street.

Over 125 door prizes were given out in addition to many prizes in the various contests.

The Mokena Civic Association who sponsored this the fourth annual Mokena Homecoming and Fall Festival has been receiving many commendatory messages on their most successful project.

People who had not seen one another in years met on the Homecoming grounds.

The Association is highly pleased with the financial returns and the profit realized will be used for local civic purposes.

That the public was highly interested in and appreciative of the high standard of the entertainment program was evidenced Sunday night as the large crowd did not break up until a heavy downpour of rain compelled them to seek shelter.

Thank You All

The Mokena Civic Association takes this opportunity of thanking the business men of Mokena for their donations which so materially helped to make the Homecoming such a success. They also thank all who so kindly assisted, altho not members. Not forgetting the ladies who served long, faithfully and capably under the efficient leadership of Mrs. John P. Marti as cashiers. Many thanks to all who attended and we assure everything is appreciated.

Tinley Mourns Death of the Rev. C. C. Boyle

It is with deep regret that the parishioners of the St. George Catholic Church in Tinley Park and his many friends mourn the passing of Rev. C. C. Boyle who passed away August 26th in the St. Bernard Hospital in Chicago.

For the past seven years Father Boyle has been pastor of St. George's church, the church that under his leadership, had its humble origin in the old Tinley Park School house and has grown under that same leadership into one of the finest suburban parishes in this locality. St. George's church has come a long way since that cold Christmas morning six years ago that Mass was celebrated in Saenger Hall with a roomful of worshipping Catholics commemorating the birth of their King and Savior.

Without doubt the growth of this little parish was due chiefly to Father Boyle's untiring efforts to make a success and to the cooperation he instilled in his parishioners. He himself often said: "I could do nothing without my loyal parishioners." But those very "loyal parishioners" know that it was Father Boyle with his undying courage, his spartan spirit of never quitting, and above all his genial manner that has been the inspiration for all Catholics of Tinley Park in building up their fine little parish.

Father has gone to reap his reward but St. George's church is a living monument to his memory.

Father Boyle is survived by one brother Daniel Boyle, a sister, Mrs. Emil Rach, wife of Dr. Emil Rach and several nieces and nephews all of Chicago, a sister and two brothers preceding him in death.

Thursday morning funeral Mass was conducted by Father Mally from the little church in Tinley Park that Father loved. Then his remains were removed to Our Lady of Peace Catholic Church in Chicago so that his many friends outside of Tinley Park would have a chance to view him.

Impressive funeral services will be held this (Friday) morning from Our Lady of Peace church, 79th street and Jeffery avenue with many of the clergy in attendance. Rev. Thomas Byrne will officiate at this service.

Most of Rev. Christopher C. Boyle's priesthood was spent in the Chicago district. He went to St. George's church three years ago from St. James church, Maywood.

He was the son of the late Daniel and Mary Boyle.

Interment will be in Holy Sepulchre cemetery.

COAL TRUCK WRECKS

TINLEY CROSSING GATE

A big truck loaded with coal driven by a colored driver wrecked one of the arms of the electric crossing gates at the Oak Park avenue crossing of the Rock Island railroad in Tinley Park about 2:30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon.

A freight train was approaching and the crossing warning bell and the gate lights were operating but the truck driver evidently ignored both and drove onto the crossing just as the gates were closing down. The arm guarding southbound traffic on the highway, hit the top of the loaded truck and was torn to pieces.

Railroad men working near the crossing witnessed the incident and the driver was stopped. It is understood the owners of the truck will have to pay for the damages to the gate. Several hours after the mishap a new arm was installed. In between times the crossing was guarded by a Rock Island section man.

Next Tuesday morning the Frankfort beauty shop will be opened in the Folkers building by Mrs. James Long who for sometime was connected with the Vogue Academy in Joliet.

An Orchid Passed To Mokena By Manhattan Lady

The Editor is in receipt of the following "bouquet" on the Mokena Homecoming: Manhattan, Illinois, August 24, 1941. Mr. Wm. Semmler, Mokena.

Dear Mr. Semmler: Many congratulations to you and the other enterprising citizens of Mokena who so effectively planned and brought your Home Coming to such a successful culmination. I attended on Saturday night and found every feature so perfectly conducted that it clearly bespoke of the well organized groundwork of plans laid previously by the various committees. Orchids are surely due to Mokena and its splendid people.

I have enjoyed reading the Home Coming edition of your paper and am asking you to mail a copy to Mrs. M. J. Cunningham of 1720 Bates Ave., Springfield. As a former Mokena resident, she will undoubtedly enjoy this copy.

Most cordially,
FLORENCE LYNK.

Colorful Mardi Gras To Mark Close of Riverview

One of the most colorful Mardi Gras Carnivals in the history of Riverview draws to a close Sunday evening, September 7th, with the drawing of prizes for the school bands and drum and bugle corps entered in the Park's "Tournament of Music".

By the time the big amusement Park winds up its 1941 activities, more than one hundred student musical organizations will have paraded the Park's 2 miles of midways and promenades.

The bands who have scored the greatest number of points in the opinion of the Park's judges, will receive appropriate trophies.

The bands entered in the contest represent towns and cities in Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Michigan and Wisconsin. Every member of the playing organization is the guest of Riverview. and receives complimentary tickets to many of the Park's leading attractions.

A survey of Riverview visitors shows that the Pair-O-Chutes, the Bobs, Thompson's Motordrome and the Flying Turns were among the most popular attractions during the 1941 season. Park officials estimate that more than two and a half million visitors will have enjoyed the Park's attractions this season.

Missing Child Causes Kidnap Scare In Tinley Park

Tinley Park had a kidnap scare and an intensive hunt for a missing child Monday afternoon of this week. About four o'clock of that afternoon the four year daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Holwedel of Tinley Park was reported missing.

The parents had just located in the Saenger hall building. A lot of remodeling work is being done on this building and at first it was thought the child might have dropped into some opening. A thoro search of the premises was made, but no trace of the youngster was found.

Chief of Police C. A. Steinhagen was notified and the search was on. County and State Highway police were also called and a description of the missing child was put on the police radio. It was feared she had been kidnapped. Soon a huge crowd of men, women and children joined in the search. Every spot possible in and about the village was searched without yielding the slightest clue.

About 8:30 o'clock Mrs. Walter Stelter heard a child's voice calling "Mama, Mama". Following the sound of the voice she looked up and suddenly saw the missing child looking out of a pigeon cote atop of a two story warehouse near the Vogt Department store. The warehouse was quickly opened and the little girl was rescued. She was surrounded by the pigeons and was not afraid of them, but when she saw the big crowd of people she did become frightened and began to cry.

The warehouse had been opened during the day and it is presumed the child toddled into the building unnoticed and was locked in the building when the store force closed up the building for the day.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Holwedel were as much relieved and happy over the safe return of the little girl as were the parents. What the child meant when she called "Mama" was Mabel when she saw Miss Mable Wilke in the crowd.

Will Be Located In McGovney Place Tomorrow Morning

This Saturday morning the Mokena Postoffice will be located in new quarters yet old. It will be located in the McGovney Building in the same room it was located in when Ona E. McGovney was postmaster about 37 years ago. The work of removing the post office fixtures, etc., from the present quarters in the Krapp building will be done this Friday night after the post office closes for the day.

The new quarters have been newly decorated and the barbershop of G. M. Krause which has been located in the room to be occupied by the post office, has been relocated in the east end of the building used for Red Cross headquarters recently.

The McGovney Building is centrally located in the business center of the town and is near the depot.

During the past 37 years the post office site has been changed quite a number of times. While Postmaster McGovney was in charge the office was changed from the west to the east side of the building. After he resigned the postmastership the office was moved to the old Sterner building formerly occupied by the telephone office. Then it was moved to the old Zahn building which was destroyed by fire a number of years ago. Then it was located in the building occupied by the Royal Blue store and finally in its present location.

The postoffice has had about as many different postmasters as it has had moves. Following Mr. McGovney, Mrs. Sadie Grogan, Mrs. Daisy Lynk, Simon Hohenstein held the office. Mrs. Margaret O'Brien is the present postmistress.

When you go for your mail tomorrow morning (Saturday) be sure to remember that the post office has moved into a new location.

Build Huge Plants and Power Dams to Supply 2 Billion Pounds Aluminum for U. S. Defense

William Knudsen, director-general of OPM estimates the U. S. will need an annual production of 1,600 million pounds of aluminum for national defense. Map shows where bulk will be produced. Plants indicated by pouring ladle symbol, Nos. 1 to 5 are now producing at combined rate of 635 million pounds, by middle of 1942 will reach 720 million. Plant 6 produces 40 million pounds, and Plant 7 (nearing completion) 60 million. Proposed government plants will produce in millions of pounds when completed: (8) 150, (9) 100, (10) 100, (11) 90, (12) 70, (13) 60 and (14) 30. Part of Canada (15) production has been contracted for by United States.

Special to Western Newspaper Union

WASHINGTON, D. C.—What has been happening throughout the United States during the last few weeks would have constituted a phenomenon anywhere but in a democracy.

From Sauk Center to gay Broadway a fellow could take his girl to the swellest dance in town with no more capital than a couple of battered pots and pans. In Oklahoma City, solid citizens drove downtown to hurl their skittles and double boilers at a target painted on the posterior of an effigy Hitler, then let them lie there for Uncle Sam to pick up. In Harrison, N. Y., a dog bit a girl scout soliciting old aluminum from house to house; he was a German police dog, of course. Gypsy Rose Lee, exhibiting rare form (sic), contributed a pan dance. And more than 1,000,000 Americans did their bit in the drive to collect scrap aluminum for national defense.

In a few short months the threat of Hitlerism had brought the light, silvery metal off the kitchen ranges of the nation and dumped it all over the front page. For just as World War I has been described as a war of steel, World War II was rapidly developing into a war of aluminum.

World War I was a static and surface affair, fought from fixed positions. World War II is characterized by lightning-like movements of highly mechanized fighting forces. Airplanes and tanks rule the land, while airplanes and swift, modern battle fleets fight the Battle of the Atlantic.

Eighty to 90 per cent of today's military airplane is aluminum, for alloys of the metal, as strong as structural steel, are only one-third as heavy. Modern tanks use the aluminum for gun platforms, interior fittings and wherever else it can be employed efficiently to save weight and gain maneuverability. Today's battleship uses more than a million pounds—several times as much as the whole city of New York rounded up in the pot-and-pan drive.

Restricted Use.

This explains why you can no longer obtain aluminum for egg poachers, for refrigerator trays, for streamlined trains, hair curlers, bridge girders or chewing gum wrappers. Gone to defend its country, aluminum is needed in quantities the like of which peacetime America never imagined, much less consumed.

The United States' annual military requirements of aluminum when the defense program gets into full production, have been estimated at from 1,200,000,000 pounds to 2,000,000,000 pounds a year and up. Suppose we take 1,600,000,000 pounds—the estimate of William Knudsen, director-general of OPM—as a fair average. That is twice as much aluminum as the entire world produced only five years ago. It is roughly equal to the entire world production of 1940, notwithstanding the gigantic war machines that were built. In terms more familiar to all of us, it is more than twice as much aluminum as this country has consumed in all its history for cooking utensils and electric refrigerators combined.

What is being done to meet this challenge? A great deal—some of it by private enterprise, some of it by the government, some by the two working together.

The Aluminum Company of America—"Alcoa"—since it was the only producer of virgin (new) aluminum in the United States until this year, was first to get under way with defense expansion. What it has done is summed up in the recent report of the house military affairs committee on defense progress:

Aluminum Price Decline.

"In 1938 this company finished the year with an inventory of a stock of aluminum equal to the normal requirements for a year. As of the date of April 3, 1939, congress had authorized the navy to build 3,000 planes and the army 6,000. Such a program required no expansion of production facilities, inasmuch as a year's supply of the metal was on hand. However, late in 1938 this company inaugurated a program with additions since made to it calling for the capital expenditure of over $200,000,000. Instead of an increase in the price of aluminum, as there has been in practically all strategic and critical materials, in some instances as high as 200 per cent, there has been a decline in the price of approximately 14 per cent. All the testimony given before this committee was to the effect that the Aluminum Company of America had given 100 per cent co-operation, had not only used its own money for expansion, but of its own initiative took steps to treble its production." Alcoa by July, 1942, will be producing 725,000,000 pounds annually.

Seven New Plants.

Aided by RFC loans totaling some $35,000,000, the Reynolds Metals company, long a fabricator of aluminum, this year entered the business of making the metal. At Listerhill, Ala., one of its two plants is already in operation, and at Longview, Wash., another is nearing completion. Together they will make 100,000,000 pounds a year.

OPM is reported to have recommended to the war department the construction of seven new government plants. According to the reports, these would be run by private companies, three by Alcoa, one by Bohn Aluminum and Brass corporation, one by Union Carbide and Carbon, and one by the Olin corporation. These plants would add 600,000,000 pounds a year. The Metals Reserve company, a government corporation, has contracted with the Aluminum Company of Canada to obtain about 750,000,000 pounds, 187,000,000 to be delivered during 1942-1944.

Secondary, or reclaimed, aluminum (for the metal can in some ways be used over and over again) will add further tonnage. The pots and pans collected in the recent drive, for instance, cannot be used for making bombers but they might be remelted and used to make army field kitchen equipment or to "quiet" steel, thus freeing other aluminum for airplanes. The steel industry, which burns up one-half pound to five or six pounds of aluminum in the making of each ton of steel, may well consume 100,000,000 pounds next year.

Aluminum, paradoxically, is the most plentiful of all the metallic elements known to man. It is in the clay under our feet, in the rocks high on a nearby hill, in the water we swim in and often in the very food we eat.

Aluminum is never found in the native state, as iron, copper and gold are; it is always locked tight in chemical combination with other elements. Napoleon III, awake to the advantage of light aluminum cavalry equipment would give him over his enemies, offered a fortune to the French scientist who could find a cheap way of producing the metal, which then cost $545 a pound. But it was not until 1886 that an American youth, Charles Martin Hall, unlocked the secret and paved the way for aluminum at its present price of 17 cents.

Hall's process, still the basis of the aluminum industry, makes use of an electrolytic furnace. This large rectangular pot is filled with cryolite, the "stone like ice," found only in far-off Greenland, but manufactured synthetically in large quantities here. Powerful electric current is introduced into the cryolite, passes through it, heating it to a molten mass, and leaves through the lining of the pot. A white substance like powdered sugar, called alumina (which is merely aluminum chemically combined with oxygen), is dissolved in the molten cryolite. The electric current decomposes the alumina, the oxygen passing off as gas and the then molten aluminum, heavier than the cryolite, sinking to the bottom of the pot. The aluminum is then tapped into ladles and poured into ingot at intervals.

Before the Hall process can be employed many complicated operations must be performed to obtain the alumina. It may be recovered from a number of materials, but it is obtained economically only from bauxite, a mineral which looks sometimes like clay and sometimes like rock and occurs in many combinations of colors. Roughly, four pounds of highgrade bauxite will make two pounds of alumina, which will then make one pound of aluminum. 12 kilowatt hours of electricity are required to make a single pound of aluminum.

Demands for High Tariffs at Close of War Expected . . . U. S.-Britain Will Train 90,000 Plane Crews Next Year . . .
(Bell Syndicate-WNU Service.)

WASHINGTON.—High tariffs are breeders of wars, in the opinion of many earnest students of international trade and international relations, first and foremost among whom might be cited Cordell Hull, secretary of state. It was his favorite theory for years that peace and friendly relations could be built by the mutual lowering of tariff barriers. Witness his pursuit of reciprocal trade agreements.

But unfortunately it is a vicious circle, if we assume the truth of Mr. Hull's favorite conviction. Although trade barriers may lead to wars, there is no doubt whatever that wars lead to trade barriers.

Let us look into the future a moment, and try to visualize what will happen in these United States when peace comes. We now have an army of nearly 2,000,000 men. Of these all but a little more than 200,000 are TEMPORARY soldiers—soldiers for the duration. By November, 1918, we had an army of more than 4,000,000 men, 2,000,000 of them overseas.

If this war continues as long as President Roosevelt expects, and we either get into the shooting stage, or keep getting closer and closer to the danger of it, we will have an army of not less than 4,000,000 men, probably more, before it is all over.

With peace will come the rapid discharge of more than 3,500,000 men from the army alone. There will be the discharge of men from the navy, which also will have increased enormously by that time.

Defense Contracts Will Be Canceled

But that is only part of the picture. The government will be cancelling national defense contracts right and left, those for our own forces and those for Britain, Russia and whatever other countries may be fighting the Nazis when that day comes. This will mean that MILLIONS of men and women will lose their jobs—always assuming the war goes on for several years more and that the speeding up and expansion of defense production continues as expected.

What has all this to do with tariffs? Just this: Those ex-soldiers, ex-workers in defense plants, etc., will want jobs. So there will be tremendous pressure on congress NOT to let in any foreign products which would thus deprive Americans of work. The pressure which resulted in the much maligned Fordney-McCumber tariff bill of 1922 will seem mild in comparison. And this time it won't be primarily from manufacturers; it will come most heavily from labor unions, which are much more effective politically.

So, to those who think the depression and the war date from the Fordney-McCumber bill of 1922, the vicious circle will start all over again!

U. S. and Britain Air-Training Program

By the end of the year the British empire will be turning out trained airplane crews at the rate of 50,000 a year. The actual number of men in 50,000 crews can be only estimated. The British are not telling that, because it would show the most casual German the precise division as between fighters and bombers planned by the British. But the minimum of course is one man for a small fighter plane, and the present maximum is nine men for the big bombers.

This training is going on throughout the British empire. Much of it is in Britain, more in Canada. As has been published, much of the training of British and Canadian pilots is being conducted in the U. S.

The amazing fact about this is not that it is being done, but the magnitude of the program. It is Britain's answer to the question often propounded here—whether the British will be able to man all the planes this country will be sending them.

But if one regards the United States as the ally—eventually—of Britain against Adolf Hitler, the picture becomes even more imposing. The army and navy have separate programs. Already the army has reached the rate of 12,000 crews a year, while the navy has almost reached its maximum, of 10,000 crews a year. But by next year, the army figures, it will be turning out well-trained airplane crews at the rate of 30,000 a year!

Adding the army and navy totals, we can expect this country to be producing 40,000 airplane crews a year, starting in 1942. This does not count the C.P.T. or Civilian Pilots Training organization, nor the training of young men by the private airplane lines to pilot their commercial planes.

Excluding this civilian training, British and American airplane crews will be "coming off the line" at the rate of 90,000 a year sometime early in 1942, which might be calculated to give Hitler and Marshal Goering a little pause!

Wasn't Asking for Trouble That Early in the Morning

Two travelers had just met. One was doing most of the talking.

"Yes," he said, "I arrived home one morning after midnight and, as I opened the door, I saw a stranger kissing my wife. I closed the door softly and hurried downstairs. At 1 a. m. I came back. I opened the door softly—and there was the stranger, still kissing my wife. So I went downstairs again. At 1:15—"

"Just a minute," interrupted the other man. "Why did you keep galloping downstairs? Why didn't you walk right into the room?"

"What?" cried the talkative man. "And have my wife catch me coming home at that hour?"

Private Performance

"And is there any instrument you can play?" asked the hostess who was pressing a guest to entertain the party.

"Not away from home," he replied.

"That's strange. What do you play at home?"

The guest sighed deeply as he answered:

"Second fiddle!"

INSTALLMENT SIX

THE STORY SO FAR: Bound for the Chibougamau gold country, six men lost their lives on the Nottaway river. Red Malone, Garrett Finlay, brother of one of the six, and Blaise, half-breed guide, arrive at Nottaway posing as surveyors.

When Blaise had finished Finlay looked hard at Malone across the fire. "How does that strike you?" he asked.

"So far as I'm concerned," said Red, driving a fist like stone into his cupped hand, "I'd like to get this white-haired beauty, now. Set a trap for him and finish him right here. It's got to be sometime, why not tonight?"

Finlay shook his head. "Not yet, Red! You forget it's Isadore we're after. I want to talk to Waswanipi Indians first who must have met Bob and, later, seen his smashed canoe. We're leaving now for the head of the lake."

"I guess you're right, boss. We want that evidence first."

"What's your idea, Blaise?" asked Garry.

Brassard drew deeply on his pipe before he answered: "At fishin' camp at head of de lake is dat Montagnais treaty chief dey call Pierre Wabistan, de Injun on Matagami tell us about. Dose fallar here to-night say he have moch trouble at de spring trade wid Tete-Blanche. We have talk wid him."

"That's our man, Red!" cried Garry. "Did you ask these Indians about the men lost on the Waswanipi River, Blaise?"

"Ah-hah! Dey say Pierre Wabistan have story to tell about dat." "They knew nothing, themselves?"

"No, dey say talk wid Pierre." "You bet we will! All right, let's go! We'll leave a nice fire for Tete-Blanche to warm his hands on."

Through the night the rhythmic "churn-swish, churn-swish" of three maple blades drove the Peterboro up the lake. At last, when the eastern hills were rimmed with fire the canoe headed inshore and the tired crew cooked a meal and slept. Far in the distance, like battleships at anchor, the islands off the mouth of the Waswanipi hung above the windless mirror, reflecting the green ridges of the shores.

CHAPTER VI

Camped on the islands the Montagnais who, in winter, hunted the hinterlands, lived through the short summer on their gill-nets and sturgeon spears.

"Where did they say Pierre Wabistan is camped, Blaise?" asked Garry, on the following afternoon, as the Peterboro approached the maze of islands.

"On islan' wid big boulder."

As the canoe passed the fishing camps where lines of ripples thrusting from points of shore marked the wood floats of gill-nets set for pike, dore and whitefish, it was hailed by men sprawled in the warm sun in front of caribou-skin teepees.

An oldish Indian with the eyes and hooked beak of an eagle waited with three young men as the canoe slid in to the stony beach of an island marked by a huge boulder.

"Kekway!" greeted Blaise, shaking hands with the four Montagnais. "Where is Chief Wabistan?" he asked in Cree.

The old man replied in English: "You look in his face." His darting eyes covered Blaise, Garry and Red in turn, from hair to moccasins.

"We come to make picture of de lake for de Faders in Ottawa," said Blaise. "We wish to make talk wid you."

Wabistan nodded, measuring Finlay in a long stare as if probing for his thoughts. Then he said: "You are brave man to come here."

"Why do you say that?" demanded Garry.

"Manee white man die on Waswanipi River!"

"The man I'm after!" thought Garry. Then he said: "Let us smoke and take council, Chief Wabistan. We need two canoe-men. Will your sons go with us?"

The young Montagnais looked doubtfully at their father's impassive face. Garry glanced at Blaise but Brassard's features were as immutable as stone. He handed each of the Indians a plug of Hudson's Bay nigger-head and they squatted on their heels and filled their pipes. Finlay struck a match, lit Wabistan's pipe, then his own and, after an interval of puffing, asked: "What killed the white men you say died?"

Wabistan's narrowed eyes focused on a distant island. In his face was no trace of humor as he said: "Ver strange bug keel dem."

Finlay caught Red's surprised look as the Indian continued. "Eet fly more quick dan duck-hawk and it sting more deep dan otjowek, de deer-fly." The old man's gaze hung to the island. The faces of his sons were glazed with awe.

"And it starts to fly with a loud noise," added Finlay, gazing straight before him.

"Yes, as the ice splits wid cold."

"You saw the white men who died last summer?" Fearing to break the spell, Finlay still avoided Wabistan's eyes.

"Two bodies I saw below de Frying Pan on de Waswanipi."

"The year before that there were four who died. Did you see them?" "No."

"Those you saw last year were young?"

"Too young to die!"

"They were shot?"

"Dey were shot—den broken by rocks w'en dey pass t'ru whitewater."

Finlay sucked in a deep breath with a pain that searched his heart. Reading the face of his friend, Blaise addressed Wabistan in Cree on the chance that the old man might answer the bold question more frankly in his native tongue.

"Why does this Tete-Blanche shoot white men from their canoe?"

Wabistan's face reflected no surprise. "Tete-Blanche tells the people white men who hunt gold shall come to this country," he replied in Montagnais. "It is the Indian's country and the Indian's gold."

"Why does he say that?"

"Because he fears that the white men will go away and tell what they see."

Blaise interpreted the startling reply.

"Ask him if it's gold on the sandbars of the river Isadore wishes to hide from the white man," suggested Garry.

"I have never seen gold," murmured the old man.

Garry met Red's incredulous eyes.

"Then ask him, Blaise, what it is

An oldish Indian with the eyes and hooked beak of an eagle waited.

that Isadore hides from the white men," he prompted.

"He say," interpreted Blaise, "if we wait here until de 'Moon when de Bird fly aftair de Moul't we see strange t'ing. More he will not say now."

"August," said Finlay. "We will wait." He rose and gripped Wabistan's bony hand. "You hate Isadore and Tete-Blanche?"

The eyes of the Indian glittered with a look as feral as a wolverine's. His face worked with his wrath. "Tete-Blanche and Wabistan are like wolf and carcajou! Some day de wolf will feel de carcajou's claw!"

"Good!" thought Garry. "We need him. But what can it be Isadore doesn't want seen by white men?"

"That night the water around the islands seemed alive with giant glowworms as the torches of the Montagnais flared and faded while their canoes patrolled the bars where the sturgeon lay. To add to the food supply the Peterboro joined the birch-barks."

Five of the great fish lay in the canoe when their last torch sputtered and died. Finlay was easing the boat toward camp while Red and Blaise smoked when, from the shadows, the wraith of a canoe moved across their bows and a torch held by a short, crouching figure, burst into flame. In the stern paddled a man with white hair. The canoe moved on and, as a sponge wipes a slate, the murk blotched out the white-haired paddler.

"He's on our trail!" whispered Malone.

"Yes," answered Garry, "Tete-Blanche and his wolves are on our trail."

"Why not go after him and settle it?"

"No! We've got other work to do first."

CHAPTER VII

At daylight Finlay was at Wabistan's skin teepee. The bedlam of his yelping dogs brought the treaty-chief from his blanket.

"Tete-Blanche is here!" announced Blaise. "Somewhere in the islands!"

"He has followed you? How do you know?"

"Last night we saw him when a torch flared in a canoe."

men start out on the Nottaway, despite warnings. They escape an ambush prepared for them and continue toward the Hudson's Bay post. Finlay and Malone visit Isadore. They later learn that Isadore's men will soon attempt to kill them.

"A little man held the torch in the bow?"

"Yes, a small man."

"It was Tete, his shadow, who obeys him like a dog—even to killing those he hates." Wabistan kicked at a pebble with his moccasin, then he lifted a face seamed with the hate that glowed in his eyes.

"Iste! Tete-Blanche is hunting you," he said in Montagnais, "and he comes here to find Kinebik, the wabeno, who is my enemy."

"He is a conjuror, this Kinebik?"

The old Indian laughed. "Kinebik, the Serpent, is a false shaman. Tete-Blanche uses him to put fear into the hearts of the foolish ones who listen to his medicine. He tells my people he talks with spirits."

Blaise interpreted Wabistan's remarks to his friends. "But Wabistan is treaty-chief and the Montagnais will not listen to Kinebik," murmured Finlay.

Wabistan turned to Finlay and his breath hissed through his teeth. "There are many who will listen! There is trouble among my people!"

"Where is this wabeno, Kinebik, now?" asked Blaise in Cree.

"He hides somewhere in the islands from my sons."

"You are hunting him?"

"Enn-eh! Yes!" The old Indian glared savagely into Brassard's square face. "This Tete-Blanche will ruin the Montagnais! He gives them whiskey to steal their fur. He has come to the head of the lake to find you. He is Isadore's neshiwe, his killer."

Brassard's slits of eyes glittered. His moment had come. "Tete-Blanche will not return to Isadore!"

He seized Wabistan's bony hand. "He is your enemy! He is our enemy! We are brothers! You and your sons will lead us to the grave of the white men who say were shot on the river last year. Then we will hunt Tete-Blanche and Kinebik. When we find them Wabistan will again be happy."

With growing wonder, Finlay and Malone watched Blaise draw his knife. Facing the chief he stiffened, raised the knife and touched the steel hilt to his forehead. Straight as a spruce, his burning eyes on Brassard's solemn face, Wabistan drew his own knife and repeated the ceremony. Then the hands of the two joined over their crossed knife blades in consummation of the Montagnais oath of brotherhood in a common cause.

Blaise rapidly interpreted his talk with Wabistan and the two white men took the oath with the old chief and his sons.

The following day a Peterboro and two birch barks entered the mouth of the Waswanipi River. In their rear, on either shore, traveled a son of the chief to watch for following canoes and a possible ambush. Three days of polling, tracking and carrying around rapids brought them to the roaring mile of falls, chutes and boiling reaches climaxing in the Frying Pan, the white chaos which gave the rapids its name. After a search in the birch scrub of the high shore Wabistan raised his hand. "It is here," he called, "the grave!"

Red glanced at Finlay's bitter face. "It will be hard, Garry, to see him now. You'd better leave it to Blaise and me."

"You can't identify him! They'll want to know, back home, that I saw him. I've got to see the evidence that he was shot."

Red nodded and Finlay joined Blaise and Wabistan beside a heap of small boulders. "The carcajou let dem sleep," said the Indian. "De rock too heavy to move!"

While they removed the boulders protecting the shallow grave, Finlay was tortured with memories of the younger brother who had come so far to die. The year previous he had received a letter from Bob that he had decided to join the Chibougamau gold rush, with a partner, the following summer. That was all. Bob had left North Bay and the family had had a post card from Nottaway announcing that they had decided to take the Waswanipi Trail. That had been the last of Bob Finlay. The ruthless North had swallowed him. No word of his fate had reached the waiting father and mother at North Bay until there had come the anonymous letter Garry carried in his wallet, with its sinister final sentence: "I don't believe these six men were drowned."

The man who had written that letter had guessed only too well.

Following this it had taken weeks of wire-pulling for Finlay to obtain from his superiors the Nottaway assignment for himself and Malone. But in the end the letter from the unknown writer had brought it about and they had received their orders.

Shortly Malone stood beside the man whose brooding eyes were on the rock-scarred rapids below him. "Garry!"

"Yes."

"They shot them. The change in him—it's going to be hard for you, Garry."

"I've got to see him!"

Leftover bits of jelly can be used for stuffing pears or apples to be baked.

Pears stuffed with chopped nuts and creamed cheese make a delicious salad when served on crisp lettuce leaves.

Before applying linseed oil to outside of soapstone sink or tubs, first go over with sandpaper to make them smooth.

If one-half level teaspoon of baking powder is added to every four eggs used in making a soufflé it will not fall after it has been removed from the oven.

Add raisins to your preserves, jams and chutney to give them pleasing chewiness.

To prevent silk dresses from slipping off wood and iron coat-hangers, paste or sew a piece of velvet on each end of the hanger.

Chopped salted peanuts mixed with a little dark brown sugar give a crunchy coating to finger-lengths of cakes or to date, raisin or cocoanut sticks. Try this next time you are fixing up a trayful of "goodies" for your tea table.

Prolific Insects

Every season the white ant or termite proudly produces a million baby termites to swell the world's ant population. Toads and frogs both have large families, the former in the neighborhood of 6,000 at a time, and the latter half that number.

Snakes are three to four times as prolific as rabbits, for whereas the latter rarely produce more than a dozen baby rabbits at a birth, a snake often produces 40.

The king of the jungle, Lord Lion, is usually the proud father of quads, and his hereditary enemy, the tiger, can boast of the same number. Finally, the elephant, last descendant of the prehistoric monsters, rarely has more than one baby elephant at a time.

ARGO THEATRE

Mr. Joe Learner, Proprietor, 7666 West 63rd Street, Argo. Phone Summit 453.

There is nothing which adds so greatly to the progress of the community as does a "live-wire" theatre such as this one. It not only brings the world's greatest stars here to entertain us, but it brings added business activity and thus benefits the entire community. It should have the most liberal patronage of the entire people.

In this day of high cost of living the management of this theatre never lowered the standard but insists the best is none too good for the people of this part of the country. While the class of productions shown here costs a little more than the ordinary kind, the management has refused to lower standards.

The people of the rural communities when tired of the toil of the day can find no more pleasure than an evening's entertainment at this popular theatre. A few minutes drive to town for an interesting photoplay, will make one more fit for another day's work.

In this 1941 review of Better Business we take pleasure in recommending this modern theatre to all of our readers.

There is no one who has aided more in the beautification of estates in this section of the country than Mr. Zook.

Some of Mr. Zook's developments are truly wonders and something our late Luther Burbank would have marveled at.

They are practical landscape architects, being able to give valuable suggestions as to the kind and number of trees, plants, shrubs and flowers necessary to make your lawn or ground a veritable paradise.

They are able and ready to plant trees, plants, flowers and shrubs so that there will be a continuous bloom all the year 'round. Their nursery is well planted at all times and no matter whether it is for the winter season in the open country or for the spring, summer or fall they will arrange a selection that will give you a place that is a wonder of nature.

Far seeing people have Mr. Zook make regular visits to their places, look over the trees most carefully, trim off superfluous branches, trim them or make any repairs necessary. A regular inspection will catch small defects before they grow large, and remedy at small cost what would be very expensive to fix later on. The importance of tree inspection cannot be too strongly urged. Trees kept in good order will greatly enhance the sales value of a place, and they will always be a joy to the owner. A consultation with a reputable man such as J. D. Zook should be the preoccupation of every home owner if not already done.

In making this review of the progress of the day due mention should not be omitted of the excellent work performed by J. D. Zook in the beautification of lawns, estates and boulevards in this part of the State.

Argo Cleaners & Dyers offer the people of this section of the state complete service and have a modern plant where all work is done under their supervision.

They have made a thorough study of the business both from wide reading and long experience and have built a plant that is thoroughly modern in every way and equipped according to the latest ideas for all the work they do. They use the best process in cleaning, leaving the garment fresh and clean. In every department they have people who have a delicate sense of color distinction.

They feature work on suits, coats, overcoats, dresses, furs, gloves, caps, hats, curtains, draperies, fine silks and woollens, comforts and many household effects. No matter what you have it is well to consult them as they clean and press just about everything.

Mr. Chas. Demitrin the Proprietor saves the people much in the way of clothing as by his process clothes look like new and if you will get your soiled togs together and take them in you will find that they will look so good that in many cases it will be unnecessary to buy new ones.

In this 1941 review we are glad to compliment this progressive establishment and to refer its activities to all of our readers.

ARGO LUMBER COAL & SUPPLY CO.

MR. J. FRANK LAMBERT, PROP.

Lumber, Coal, Building Materials, Cement, plaster, sand, Sewer pipe, Mason's Supplies, drain tile, metal lath, Wall board, roofing materials, brick, window and storm sash.

A well known Argo concern located at 7800 West 62nd Place, Phone Summit 13 is headquarters in this section for builders' supplies—carries a complete line of builders' supplies on hand at all times. The most prominent firm in this line.

As the general purpose of this edition is to give both the local and outside world an adequate idea of our progress and the general excellence of our various products we deem it quite appropriate to devote this space to this well known firm.

The men who originated this enterprise obtained liberal education in the school of experience and supplemented this with a keen insight into the markets of the world and with this desirable foundation they equipped themselves to render an unexcelled service in builders' supplies. Then the management has had in its employ, only men of experience, many of whom have been with the company for some time, thus assuring the public of a high state of efficiency and uniformity in their products which find a large and ready sale.

The active operation of the business is in the hands and under the direction of men who are so well known that any further remarks are unnecessary, but we cannot refrain from stating that this enterprise is fortunate in having as its active head, men so thoroughly familiar with all the details of the builders' supply business and whose executive ability and familiarity with business conditions has kept the firm abreast of the times.

Through their straight forward dealings with the public the management has made friends for the company and they have always taken an active interest in the affairs of its employees and a commendable interest in their fellowmen, realizing that a concern located in a community that is not progressive will wither and die because of its environment. This is without question one of the country's most important and valued companies.

FORD SALES and SERVICE

Have one of the Finest Lines of Used Cars of this Section.

7665 West 63rd

Phone: Summit 643

Probably the most remarkable thing about the Ford is the fact that in 1893 when the first Ford bumped over the sill of its little brick shed in Bagley Avenue in Detroit out into the springtime sunlight its maker never once doubted as to its ultimate success.

It frightened horses, blocked traffic and Mr. Ford found it necessary to chain it up to prevent people from running away with it.

Since that time over 39,000,000 of them have gone into operation many of which are still giving excellent service to the owner. Mr. Ford has never disappointed the public, and his 1941 V8 represents the crowning achievement for the automobile industry, combining beauty, utility, economy, comfort and resale value in one achievement at an unheard of price for an Eight capable of over 90 miles per hour.

The Ford Motor Company is ably represented in Argo by the West Side Motor Sales Co., and you are invited to come in and get specifications on this, Henry Ford's Greatest Triumph.

They have a full line of drugs, druggists sundries and practically every proprietary medicine known. These are all secured from the very best houses and are pure and tested. The fact that the management had a thorough training in the profession makes him careful in the filling of all prescriptions to see that the compounding is correctly done; proper directions are attached and everything is exact. This department is highly recommended by the physicians and well patronized by people for many miles.

They specialize in the carrying of standard goods which are known the country over. No matter whether it is a proprietary medicine, perfumes, toilet articles, or any of the other specialties you will find on it the stamp of a well-known manufacturer who stands behind the products as does also this store.

Cigars, candies and specialties, as well as the long line of druggist sundries, are here furnished the public with the most accommodating service.

The proprietor, Mr. Burg, of the Rexall Store, is one of those genial, and whole souled personalities who dispenses good cheer on all occasions.

The prescription department is under the personal supervision of Mr. Burg and the most careful attention is given to this end of the business. For of all branches of a Drug Store, this is one of the most important because of the fact that the lives of so many people are dependent on the compounds.

Special mention should be made of the Soda Fountain where they dispense only the best drinks and real home cooked foods.

We are glad to refer this reliable store and citizen to our readers, as a real booster for our onward progress in this 1941 Review.

MEDOW FARMS DAIRY STORE

MR. TONY MICHALEK, PROP.

A real Community Asset Located at 4823 West 65th Street. Phone Summit 414
Fresh Wisconsin Eggs Daily, Also a Full Line of the Finest Cheese.
High Grade Live Poultry Dressed While You Wait.

An old proverb is "A Healthy Body Breeds a Healthy Mind". The Meadow Farms Dairy Store by providing wholesome Vitamin milk and dairy products high in nutritive contents contributes probably more than any other institution in the community to the health of the baby and growing child.

Perhaps no part of agriculture has made forward strides in the past few years as dairying. When we speak of dairying today, we must first consider the fact that it is one of the greatest assets to any community—it is one of our Government's greatest sources of income—it is national in its scope, and is practically the only division of our agricultural enterprises which affords the producer—the man who milks the cows—a year 'round income.

The Meadow Farms Dairy Store was organized for the purpose of furnishing the best dairy products and have succeeded admirably, and there is no question but that their popular products are very much superior to any obtainable on the market today.

Everything in the plant is kept scrupulously clean as it is the policy of the institution not only to produce milk and cream that will pass inspection; but to turn out products that are as near an approach to the acme of perfection as modern machinery and up-to-date methods will permit. Many mothers of so called bottle-fed babies highly praise the energizing contents of the Meadow Farms Dairy Store milk.

Milk is undoubtedly nature's safest health and happiness insurance. "A bottle of milk is a bottle of health", is an expression of today that is quite in order. A glass of milk at ten in the morning and three in the afternoon wards off that tired feeling. Everywhere school and health authorities are insisting that milk be served to school children.

In this editorial review we take great pleasure in complimenting Mr. Michalek of this dairy upon his modern business methods. The people of this community are indeed fortunate to have them here.

Order your dairy products today from the Meadow Farms Dairy Store.

Cheese An Ideal Food Of Many Uses

Cheese is a concentrated form of milk; it takes about five quarts of milk to make one pound of cheese. In the kitchen cheese can be used in more ways than almost any other food. It is also one of the best protein foods.

There are few, if any, foods in constant use today that can boast of the versatility, economy and tastiness of cheese.

America's taste for cheese has vastly increased, with a 36 per cent rise in total U. S. consumption in ten years. There is still room for improvement, in the opinion of the National Dairy Council, as many foreign nations have a higher average consumption per person.

Cheese combines most of the nutritive factors in milk and is from 90 to 99 per cent digestible. Cheese is an important vitamin source and valuable for its supply of calcium and phosphorus. One ounce of hard cheese furnishes about one-third of an adult's daily need for calcium. These factors make it one of the finest foods for youngsters and adults.

Cheese can be served in innumerable ways in place of other staple protein foods which are more expensive. Here is an interesting new cheese recipe:

Savory Cheese Soup
2 tablespoons minced onion
4 tablespoons butter
4½ tablespoons flour
2 cups milk
2 cups chicken stock,
or bouillon
½ lb. sharp American cheese
½ cup minced cooked carrot
¾ cup minced cooked celery
¾ cup minced cooked green pepper

Saute onion in butter, do not allow to brown. Add flour and blend well. Place over hot water, add milk and chicken stock and cook until thickened. Add diced cheese and stir until melted. Add cooked vegetables, heat thoroughly. Serve topped with chopped parsley, popcorn or croutons. Makes 6 servings.

PALOS PARK

By DOROTHY ROBSON

Thursday afternoon and evening over 400 members of the Republican club of the 9th Ward of Chicago held a tournament at Glen Eagles Country club. Amid much fun and laughter, a steak supper was enjoyed and prizes awarded.

Tuesday afternoon Mrs. Stebbins, Mrs. Pronger and Dorothy Robson visited the Occupational Therapy Ward at Oak Forest Infirmary. For about three hours Dorothy entertained the patients with her piano playing and singing. The patients joined in singing the songs they knew and a band that was entertaining for a picnic, came in and joined the group in a few selections. One of the patients has eggs from the silk worms and is making his own silk. He says if he had the money and the help he could make enough silk to supply the United States, and the ladies would not have to go without stockings. This exhibit proved very interesting and educational. Many professors from Chicago have been out and had him explain all about it, so ladies, maybe you will have your silk hose!

CLARK ROSALIND

GABLE RUSSELL

They Met In Bombay

— Soon at the Roxy —

IN THE NAVY POT O' GOLD

They're a double charge of dynamite together, Clark Gable and Rosalind Russell in "They Met in Bombay", a rollicking adventure story of two renegades who meet and love at the cross-roads of the world, which will be featured at the Roxy Theatre, Lockport, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

Gable is smartly cut to the role of a two-fisted British army officer, who left army life for the part of a clever modern crook, who operates in the elite of the social circles. Miss Russell is in practically the same business, playing the unusual role of a feminine Raffles, at tempting to match Gable's cleverness with his every move. They come to a compromising meeting when they clash in a duel attempt to steal a fortune in diamonds, and have the police close on their heels, which forces them to board a tramp steamer, but they are trapped. From this point on, they are constantly in the proverbial hot water. This picture has no dull moments, and comes to an unexpected smashing dramatic finish.

Wednesday and Thursday, the Roxy will feature "There's Magic in Music" with Susanna Foster and Allan Jones, plus a second feature of "Kisses for Breakfast" with Denis Morgan and Jane Wyatt.

Friday and Saturday the Roxy Theatre will present a superb twin billing of "A Dangerous Game", a soul stirring murder mystery with Richard Arlen and Andy Devine. The second feature will be "Wide Open Town", a story of a western town, with a newspaper man who deals out square cornered slugs with his reforming caustic quill, with Wm. "Hopalong" Boyd, Russell Hayden and Andy Clyde.

WEEK-END SUPPER IDEAS

Guests for the week-end? or just the family? Whichever it is you'll want to take a brief vacation from the kitchen or it won't really be Labor day for you.

Here's how you do it: Bake the nutbread in advance, it's better if it stands a day or so. Mix the meat and set in the refrigerator until ready to bake. As a vegetable you'll like tender corn with lots of butter, takes only a few minutes to cook, you know. Your salad is simple and is tossed in a few seconds. Dessert, too, you can make the day before and just wait until you see what a lovely surprise it is, too. Cool and delicious, the orange freeze is tops.

A change in the meat course is the order of the day. A touch of fruit borrowed from a favorite cake and three of your favorite kinds of meat go to make up this:

Apricot Upside-Down Meat Loaf.
(Serves 8 to 10)
1 pound smoked ham (ground twice)
½ pound beef (ground)
½ pound fresh pork (ground)
2 eggs
¾ cup cold water
1 cup milk
1 cup cornflakes (crushed)
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
½ teaspoon pepper
½ teaspoon dry mustard
1 tablespoon onion (very finely minced)
4 tablespoons butter
4 tablespoons brown sugar
18 dried apricot halves (cooked)
Combine smoked ham, beef and pork with slightly beaten eggs, milk, water and cornflakes. Mix thoroughly and add Worcestershire sauce, pepper, mustard, and finely minced onion. Melt butter in bottom of a 9 by 5 by 3 loaf pan. Add brown sugar and heat until well blended. Arrange apricots, cut side up, on the bottom of the pan. Pack the meat mixture over the apricots. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for 1¼ hours.

You'll really approve of this new dessert idea, and since it's light it will be especially appropriate with a substantial main course:

Orange Freeze.
(Makes 1½ quarts)
¾ cup sugar
1 cup water
1 package orange-flavored gelatin
1 cup orange juice
2 tablespoons lemon juice
2 cups milk
Combine sugar and water and boil 2 minutes. Remove from fire and dissolve gelatin in hot syrup. Add fruit juices. Turn into freezing tray of automatic refrigerator, setting to coldest freezing temperature. When partially frozen, turn into cold bowl and beat with rotary beater until thick and fluffy. Add milk and beat until blended. Return to tray, stir every 30 minutes, and freeze until firm (5 to 6 hours).

Peach Shortcake.
Since peaches are so very good this year, you'll want to make the most of them. This will win your

LYNN SAYS:

Vegetables with interesting background and good vitamin stories intrigue me. Take watercress, for instance. You may once have gathered this tender little green among brooks and runs, but its history harks back much longer than either you or I. Watercress is an excellent source of vitamin A which promotes growth, increases resistance to infective diseases and prevents eye diseases. Excellent too is watercress in vitamin C which is so essential to good bone and teeth formation. Vitamin B, too, is found in its leaves, and that, you know, stimulates appetite and protects nerve and brain tissue and brain function. Its vitamin G content will help you have normal nutrition. The iron it contains in its copper and magnesium deposits helps make blood and nourish teeth.

THIS WEEK'S MENU

Coffee or Milk
*Recipe Given.

family's approval:
(Serves 6 to 8)
2 cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons sugar
½ cup milk
½ cup butter

Mix dry ingredients, sift twice, work in butter, add milk slowly and toss on floured board. Divide into two parts, roll to a desired thickness and bake in hot oven (400 degrees) for 12 minutes or until done. Use a buttered baking pan for baking. Split biscuit when done and spread with butter.

Peel and slice fresh peaches fine (or pulp them), sprinkle with sugar to taste, let stand in refrigerator to chill. When ready to serve, place peaches between or on top or both, top the whole with whipped cream.

Jellied Waldorf Salad.
1 package lemon gelatin
1¾ cups hot water
1 cup diced tart apple
¼ cup diced pineapple
¼ cup diced celery
¼ cup chopped nuts or cherries
¼ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons lemon juice
Dissolve the gelatin in the hot water and add the salt and lemon juice. Chill till the mixture begins to thicken and stir in the fruit and all other ingredients. Pour into molds and chill and serve.

Chicken Filling.
1 cup ground chicken meat
½ cup ground almonds
2 to 4 tablespoons celery, chopped
Lemon juice
Salad dressing to moisten (cooked, french or mayonnaise)
Salt
Mix meat, celery and almonds. Season to taste with salt and lemon juice and add enough dressing to give a spreading consistency.

Shrimp and Cucumber Filling.
1½ cups fresh cooked or canned shrimp
1 medium-sized cucumber
¼ teaspoon salt
½ cup mayonnaise
Paprika
Chop shrimps to paste; peel, remove seeds from cucumber and chop very finely, squeezing out excess water. Combine with shrimps, seasonings and mayonnaise. Chill and spread between slices of bread, cut in fancy shapes.

To accompany these good-tasting, clever sandwiches, you'll undoubtedly want to serve a cool, refreshing beverage. Why not try:

Coffee Frappe.
2 cups strong freshly brewed coffee
¼ cup cream
¼ cup powdered sugar
¼ teaspoon ground ginger
1 egg white

Place all ingredients and some cracked ice into a beverage shaker and shake well; or beat all ingredients together with egg beater and let stand in refrigerator to chill.

Egg Nog.
½ teaspoon salt
1 egg
1 to 2 teaspoons sugar
¼ teaspoon vanilla
1 cup cold milk

Beat salt, egg and sugar. Add milk and vanilla, beating thoroughly; pour into tall glass and dust with nutmeg. Yield: 1 large serving.

Variations: two tablespoons chocolate syrup; 1 tablespoon malted milk —top with whipped cream.

Sometimes on a Sunday or holiday afternoon there comes a lull which a bit of refreshment seems to fill perfectly. For that I would suggest assorted sandwiches, cool drinks, jellied Waldorf salad, and peach shortcake. All of these recipes have the little added flavoring that make them company fare.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

JOHN URGES CHRISTIAN LOVE

LESSON TEXT—I John 3:13-18; 4:7-21.
GOLDEN TEXT—Let us not love in word, neither in tongue; but in deed and in truth.—I John 3:18.

Love is a word so abused in modern speech that one almost hesitates to use it, and yet it stands for the very finest in all human relationships, and presents to us the very essence of the nature of God. We do well to redefine the meaning of love in our Sunday school classes this next Sunday. Love is not that sentimental, "wishy-washy" feeling which prompts the writing of emotional ballads, which are (like the supposed love of which they speak) "here today and gone tomorrow." Nor is it that lustful thing which now parades itself shamelessly as love, when it is nothing but animal passion. Nor is it that weak thing which totalitarian dictators make it out to be when they declare that to attain, a people must hate, not love. "Love is a desire for and delight in the welfare of another." It reaches out to all mankind, coming from God and being manifested in the gift of His Son as our Saviour. It is stronger than any earthly bonds. It is able to bear unbelievable burdens; yes, because He loved us Christ bore the sins of the whole world on Calvary. It expresses itself in courtesy, in high standards of life, and in sacrifice. Love is, as Henry Drummond put it, "the greatest thing in the world." Read I Corinthians 13 for Paul's exalted description of love.

Our lesson reveals two important facts about love—

I. Love Is an Evidence of Regeneration (I John 3:13-18).

There are two groups of people, the saved and the unsaved. The unsaved in Scripture are designated as "the world," meaning, not the physical world, but the world of unregenerate men who are against our God and His Christ. The saved are those who have come to God in Christ, who love Him and are in the center of His love. That love is, according to John, an evidence that we know God. There is an interesting contrast here.

1. The World Hates and Kills (vv. 13-15).

Today the wicked heart of man apart from Christ is revealed in the tragic events which have embroiled the whole world in conflict.

The point is that we as Christians should not be surprised if that kind of a world hates us. In fact, we should be troubled if it does not hate us, for if our Christianity means anything, it must be utterly distasteful to a world driven by hatred and the lust for blood.

2. The Christian Loves and Gives (vv. 14, 16-18).

The mark of a Christian is love for God and love for the brethren. That love demonstrates its genuineness by giving freely to meet the need of a brother, just as God freely gave His Son for our redemption. (cf. James 2:14-17).

The background of such an attitude is a proper understanding of our relationship to God, and an appreciation of His nature.

II. The Very Nature of God Is Love (I John 4:7-21).

God not only loves, but He is love.

1. God Is Love (vv. 7, 8).

"Love is the very essence of His moral nature. He is the source of all love" (R. A. Torrey). Only the one who knows God as love knows Him at all.

There is much thoughtless and meaningless talk about the love of God, as though it meant that He is careless about enforcing His divine law, that somehow He will overlook and excuse careless and wicked living. The fact is that the love of God has no real meaning unless it is understood in the light of the cross, for

2. God's Love Is Manifested in Christ (vv. 9-16).

He was sent as the giver of eternal life, the propitiation for our sins, our Saviour, and thus as the highest and deepest expression of God's love. Faith in Christ (v. 15) puts the believer in the very center of the love of God. Precious hiding place!

3. Love Casts Out Fear (vv. 17-19).

Fellowship is impossible in an atmosphere of fear, but love rules fear out. In Christ we realize that God first loved us, and then our hearts go out to Him in a warmth of devotion which brings us so close to Him that all fear is gone. The result of such fellowship with God follows, for

4. He Who Loves God Loves His Brother (vv. 20, 21).

If a man loves God, he will obey Him, and His command, which to the Christian is, "Love your brother." That is, "the first and great commandment" (Matt. 22:36-40; Deut. 6:5; Luke 10:25-28). There is no use in our talking about loving God if we have no love for the brethren, for in doing so we make God testify against us that we are liars (v. 20).

Grand Coulee World's Number One Dam

Grand Coulee, biggest dam in the world, is now in action. The Columbia river, which has been dammed, is one of the swiftest and fiercest in the world, and to curb it a barrier has been erected which is three-quarters of a mile long and 500 feet high.

The result will be a lake 151 miles long, the irrigation of 1,200,000 acres of land, and sufficient electric power to supply an area five times the size of England.

Boulder dam, which harnesses the Colorado river, with all its collateral works, was completed in 1935. It is thrown across a terrific gorge called Black Canyon, which is 2,000 feet wide, and the lake behind it is 115 miles long and took three years to fill.

So tremendous is the weight of water in this lake that geologists have suggested that it may cause a bending in the crust of the planet.

Habits of Salmon

A group of Pacific salmon, or king salmon, that inhabits the Northern Pacific waters, dies after the breeding season (July to December) is over, says Pathfinder. These salmon never return to the sea.

Other types of salmon, however, return to the sea after spawning, and remain there until the next breeding season. All salmon live partly in the sea and partly in fresh water, breeding in the latter. They ascend rivers and tributary streams to spawn.

Fun for the Whole Family

Dear Ma—
Well, I gess maybe I will be tossed into the guard house again or shot or put peeling more potatus (and I don't know witch is worser). I got one of them post cards from the Sen. Wheeler First Committee and what I read in the newspapers about all the fuss being made about it makes me awful nervous. Only some good luck will save me. I wrote a note to the President like the Senator asked me to saying I was against getting into the European war. (I did not say positively though.) And I explained while I was against it I wood go peacefully, if ordered.

But even this was wrong and only a letter I just got from Nellie Petersen keeps me from a nervous breakdown. It seems I wrote a letter to Nellie the same time I wrote to Washington, and by mistake I put the letter about not getting into the war in Nellie's envelope and sent to Mr. Roosevelt the letter I meant for Nellie.

This wood seem a good break I gess but I am not two sure becuz how will the President know? The letter he got just began "My Darling Nellie" and what will he think of a private calling his superior a name like that? In the very first sentence of the letter witch he has it says "Remember all your promises to me my dear," and what is to keep him from thinking I am talking about the very promises mentioned on that Wheeler post card? He will not know I am just talking about the promises Nellie Petersen made to me about not dancing with Sergeant Mooney no more and about marrying me if I ever get through kitchen police duties.

I think that the letter witch I sent to President Roosevelt by mistake also says I am holding him to every promise he made last year witch means Nellie's promises about always being true to me and not the President's campaign promises but he will not know this I am afraid. I think I closed this letter with a line like "I am very serious about this, honey bunch, and if you go back on your word and try to two-time me in any way I will take no nonsense." You can see what a fix I am in, ma. Every time I see an officer coming my way I think General Marshall has sent for me.

I am in bad with Nellie two on account of she does not know what to make of the letter witch she got from me and witch was meant for the President. She says that I am a louse for ever writing it in the first place. Every time I have seen Nellie I have told her I was every inch a fighting man and that war held no terrors for me, no matter whether it was on home grounds or where, so I look pretty foolish to her writing a letter to the President that I am against any war that takes me far away from home.

Come what may, ma, I am in a tough spot and I feel two worried to write more now except to close saying I love you like always.
Your loving son,
Oscar.
